Temple to host multicultural evening of music and song

Dr. Steven Horowitz, chairman of the event said the performance promises to be "uplifting."

"Music moves us in a positive way by invoking wonderful memories. Music can also change the way we feel and think — it is a definitive mood enhancer," the Temple Emanu-El board member said.

More importantly, in a world where people often concentrate on differences, we want to celebrate a musical program which will inspire us, spiritually, and also bind us together as a rich and vibrant community," Horowitz noted.

The first half, of Tantz, Samba & Soul, features traditional klezmer and Latin arrangements of songs from Russia, Rumania, France, Israel, and America. The second half, of the evening, features Kula's jazz ensemble along with the Ebony Chorale, who will sing in both English and Hebrew. The talented group of singers will perform a variety of music, including Negro spirituals, from the Florida Atlantic University Libraries' music collections, in addition to music by famous composers such as George Gershwin, Kurt Weill, and Giuseppe Verdi.

The Klezmer Company Jazz Ensemble will perform at Temple Emanuel at 7:30 p.m. on Jan. 24.
